A Concentrated Aura of Disdain

Unpleasantries is a work in progress; cards and rules are liable to change. While the game contains some explicit language, the spirit of this game is comedy and creative use of language.

Rules

Setup

To begin, shuffle the deck and deal five cards to each player while arguing loudly over who should begin as the Butt of the joke. When the loudest, most obnoxious player inevitably wins that argument everyone else should be in just the right mood to insult them. Marvelous.

Round

Each round, the Butt selects a card from their hand to place face up on the table. This card becomes the Seed card of the round, the card that other players will be building their insults around.

As a player, you'll be crafting a cutting insult to direct at your Butt using the Seed card alongside cards from your hand.

- You may use as many cards from your hand as you like.
- You may use any word on the cards, including those on the Seed card.
- You may also use any derivatives we've missed (we're not perfect).
- Small interconnective words are allowed, at the discretion of the Butt.
- Creative flair is encouraged - anything before the first word is completely fair game.

Once you have expertly strung your insult together, lay it face down on the table in front of you. When all players are ready, from the first player to the left of the Butt, take it in turns to reveal and unleash the verbal tongue lashing on the Butt.

When you're the Butt of the joke you have all the power- you decide the round winning insult by any criteria you'd like. Award that player the Seed card as a Trophy to lord over their opponents.

All players then draw back up to five cards and the player to the left of the Butt becomes the new Butt, and a new round begins.

Endgame

Play ends when one player reaches five Trophies, the main deck runs out or someone flips the table. The player with the most Trophies is declared the winner.
